Posted on January 22, 2018

LIVERMORE, CALIF. – January 22, 2018 –
(EDITOR'S NOTE: According to public documents, the industrial asset traded in September of 2017 for $66,000,000.)

In mid-September, Longfellow Logistics Center, a 610,813 SF modern logistics facility, was acquired by Bay Area-based developer Orchard Partners. Leasing agents are Steve Chess of Townsend Commercial (who advised Orchard Partners on its recent acquisition) and Jason Ovadia, Greg Matter, and Mike Murray of JLL.

The center, which is situated less than 50 miles from San Francisco's urban core, will become available in early 2019. It is in a location that optimizes local and regional distribution requirements for a broad range of users including ecommerce, retail, consumer products and durables, distributors and manufacturers.

"From a speed to market standpoint, Longfellow Logistics Center has 'first-mover advantage' for large corporate occupiers rethinking their supply chain strategy and looking for a well-located, modern logistics facility," said Jason Ovadia of JLL. "This location checks plenty of important boxes – from its cost effectiveness, to its close proximity to customers, affordable housing and labor," he added.

Within the nine Bay Area counties, Longfellow Logistics Center represents the second largest existing warehouse under one roof and is situated upon 34.43 acres with immediate access to I-580. Constructed in 1998 by IDI as a build-to-suit for Circuit City, the building has all the features of a modern logistics facility, including:

- 32-foot clear height;

- 4,000 amps; 277/480 volt; 3 phase;
- T-5 motion-sensor lighting;
- Six air transfer units provide complete air circulation every two hours;

- 48 foot width by 50 foot depth column spacing;
- 86 dock-high doors with full dock packages and pit levelers on three sides of the building;
